Join the late breaking clinical trials session on April 15, 2019. This unique session is dedicated to understanding all the nuances and issues related to important clinical trials and inform about the findings relevant to our patients.

One of these will be the first presentation of the CREDENCE trial results: could this be the first therapy to prevent kidney failure in people with type 2 diabetes and chronic kidney disease in over 15 years?

More late breaking clinical studies will be presented in the same session on April 15, 2019, including the first results from the SONAR trial of atrasentan vs placebo, and the long-term follow up data from the ACTIVE dialysis trial.

Stay tuned for more information on the WCN website in the coming weeks.

Interventional nephrology workshop in Nigeria

Through training ISN Sister Renal Centers (SRC) centers work together to learn from each other and help local teams of health professionals rise to the challenges of caring for their patients. Renal centers from across Africa joined forces to set up an interventional nephrology training workshop in Nigeria, specifically focusing on vascular access and peritoneal dialysis.

Training support for nurses globally

Specialized training for nurses can be limited in some low- and lower-middle income countries. The ISN Programs open the doors to more bespoke learning, so kidney health professionals can deliver the safest and most quality nursing care. For example, Kenya's medical community recently learned from the experiences of nurses Marie Richards and Thandiwe Ngcobo to improve dialysis and transplant patient care.
